Anna's New School

It's been a very exciting week, as we've just moved into our new school building! It's an amazing place, as the builders have used wood for the whole thing, just like in our old school, but it's also one of the first in my country designed to be really environmentally friendly.

The school took months to build, so we saw it all happening. It was really exciting seeing the builders clear the space where it would be, although it also meant that some lovely open land disappeared. And the noise of the building machines was really loud, although the builders often had to stop work because it rained so hard. We all began to think the building would never be finished.

We have five classrooms now, which are enormous – much bigger than in our previous school next door, which was very old. We share one room with people in the town when they want to have meetings and so on. There's a nursery too, a lovely dining room, and really big changing rooms which we're looking forward to using as soon as our new sports field is ready.

When you come into the school, one of the first things you notice is that there aren't any heaters in the building! Instead, the heat for the school comes from all of us inside it – the children, the teachers and the computers we use. The building is so well designed that it holds all the heat inside – and all the sound too, so if we sing inside our classrooms, we can almost believe we're inside a concert hall!

Another thing you'll notice is that the school roof has a tree on top of it! It was put there by the builders once they'd finished the roof, because they said it was the custom in Austria, the country where the roof was made. The electricity for lights and computers comes from a wind turbine on a hill behind the school. We went with our teacher to look at it yesterday, and it goes around really fast. It's so big, it can be seen for miles! We took some pictures which we're planning to put on the website.

Even though we're already using the school building, there are still some parts to be added to it – for example, at the moment we're putting on a play for parents to come and see, but we still have to walk back to our old school hall to do it. The replacement will be ready by next year, though. We're so pleased with our new school, and our teachers say we'll all learn much faster now we're in it!

Underwater Research

Fourteen-year-old Miguel Diaz talks about an exciting science project

Last month I got the chance to take part in an underwater research project in an area of the Gulf of Mexico called the Flower Gardens. A team of professional researchers, led by the scientist Dr. Matt Phillips, was trying to learn more about the fish and various creatures that live in this part of the sea. The Flower Gardens are a long way from the shore and we spent three days on a boat.

The team used a piece of underwater equipment called a Remotely Operated Vehicle (ROV) to collect information. The ROV could measure water depth and temperature and it also had a camera that sent live film back to the boat. The ROV was great fun. It was controlled by a computer on the boat, and I was allowed to operate it a few times.

However, the thing I enjoyed most was diving into the water. At first, I was quite frightened - mainly because I couldn't see land in any direction. But as soon as I jumped into the water, I wasn't afraid anymore. It was amazing to see the colourful fish swimming around and I could see all the way to the Flower Gardens, which are almost 30 metres down.

I will never forget the Flower Gardens. The trip was like a holiday but I also learnt new things about science and research projects. The team was very friendly and everyone was happy to explain what they knew about the sea. It was a great opportunity and it has made me think about my goals in life. The experience will definitely help me work harder to become a scientist.

1. What is Miguel Diaz doing in the text?
 - a. describing the part he played in a science project
 - b. explaining how to apply for a place on a science trip
 - c. giving advice on understanding difficult areas of science
 - d. persuading others to organise their own science projects

2. What does Miguel say about the ROV?
 - a. It was difficult to operate.
 - b. It could only go so far under water.
 - c. It was an expensive piece of equipment.
 - d. It recorded what was happening under water.

3. What was Miguel's attitude towards diving?
 - a. His main worry was losing sight of the boat.
 - b. He enjoyed it less than other parts of the trip.
 - c. His feelings changed once he was in the water.
 - d. He was quite disappointed by the variety of fish.

4. What effect has the trip had on Miguel?
 - a. It has changed his opinion of science.
 - b. It has improved the way he works in a team.
 - c. It has made him a lot more interested in the sea.
 - d. It has encouraged him to work towards his goals.

5. What might Miguel write in his diary about the trip?
 - a. It was very interesting working with Dr Phillips and his team but I wish someone else my age had been on the trip.
 - b. Going to the Flower Gardens was great fun. I now know much more about science but I realise there's still a lot more to learn.
 - c. The trip was like a holiday and I saw some amazing fish. The only thing I disliked was collecting information about the sea.
 - d. The Flower Gardens is a beautiful place but scientists are worried that pollution levels there will increase.
